Training for volunteers

The training provides volunteers with the skills and insight to take the next steps in their involvement with the Criminal Justice system. We have developed a number of training modules to equip volunteers with the information, skills and confidence to work in this area.

The course is run for volunteers interested in opportunities with Families Outside, but can also be adapted for a more generic overview of the issues for those involved in a criminal justice setting.

The core training will explore what volunteering in the criminal justice system means, how the volunteer can make a difference, what their role might be and what support can be offered. Emotional and practical issues for people in prison and their families will be looked at, and the impact of imprisonment, child protection and boundaries and confidentiality will be explored in more depth.
